The story unfolds in the small town of Bainbridge Island, Washington, amidst the backdrop of the Second World War. As the conflict rages overseas, the lives of three women—Elena, Meg, and Kathleen—are inextricably intertwined.

Elena McDonough, a spirited and independent artist, is determined to do her part for the war effort. She joins the ranks of the Women Airforce Service Pilots (WASPs), a groundbreaking organization that trained women to fly military aircraft. Elena's bravery and determination shine through as she faces danger and prejudice with an unwavering spirit.

Meg Prior is a young Navy wife left to fend for herself and her two children while her husband fights on the front lines. As she navigates the challenges of raising a family during wartime, Meg discovers a newfound strength and resourcefulness that she never knew she possessed.

Kathleen Danaher, a wealthy socialite, finds her life turned upside down when her husband is reported missing in action. Desperate for news and solace, she joins the war effort as a volunteer at the local airfield, where she forms an unlikely bond with Elena.
