In 1971, Bowman was hired as the head coach of the Montreal Canadiens. The Canadiens were one of the most dominant teams in the NHL at the time, and Bowman's arrival only made them stronger. Under Bowman's leadership, the Canadiens won four Stanley Cups in five years. He also helped develop some of the greatest players in NHL history, including Guy Lafleur, Steve Shutt, and Ken Dryden.

Detroit Red Wings

In 1980, Bowman left the Canadiens to become the head coach of the Detroit Red Wings. The Red Wings were a struggling team at the time, but Bowman quickly turned them into a contender. Under his leadership, the Red Wings won three Stanley Cups in six years. Bowman also helped develop some of the greatest players in Red Wings history, including Steve Yzerman, Sergei Fedorov, and Nicklas Lidstrom.

Return to the Canadiens

In 1993, Bowman returned to the Montreal Canadiens as the team's general manager. He held that position for five years, and he helped the Canadiens win another Stanley Cup in 1993. Bowman retired from hockey in 2002, but he remains one of the most respected and influential figures in the game.
