The memoir begins with the death of Harrison's husband, David, in a car accident. Harrison is devastated by David's death, and she struggles to make sense of her life without him. She turns to alcohol and drugs to numb her pain, and she begins to withdraw from her friends and family.

As Harrison grieves, she begins to explore the nature of love and loss. She writes about the intense love she felt for David, and she also writes about the pain and anger she feels after his death. Harrison's writing is honest and unflinching, and she does not shy away from the difficult emotions that she experiences.

The Kiss Memoir is a powerful and moving story of love, loss, and redemption. Harrison's writing is both raw and lyrical, and her story is one that will stay with readers long after they finish reading it.
