Kaplan's book is a must-read for anyone who wants to understand the challenges and opportunities that lie ahead in the 21st century. He offers a clear-eyed assessment of the threats and risks that we face, but he also provides a roadmap for how we can achieve victory in this new era.

Kaplan's analysis is based on his extensive travels around the world. He has seen firsthand the rise of nationalism and populism, the decline of democracy, and the growing gap between rich and poor. He has also witnessed the rise of new powers, such as China and Russia, and the decline of the United States.

Kaplan argues that we are entering a new era of global disorder because the old world order is no longer able to maintain peace and stability. The United States, which has been the guarantor of global order since the end of World War II, is now in decline. China and Russia are rising powers, but they are not yet ready or willing to take on the role of global leader.

This vacuum of leadership is creating a more dangerous world. Nationalism is on the rise, and countries are increasingly willing to use military force to achieve their goals. The global economy is also becoming more fragmented, and there is a growing risk of a global economic crisis.

Kaplan does not offer a simple solution to the challenges that we face. He believes that there is no easy way to restore global order. However, he does offer a roadmap for how we can achieve victory in this new era. He argues that we need to be more realistic about the threats and risks that we face. We need to be more willing to use military force to defend our interests. We need to be more adaptable and resilient to change. And we need to be more committed to working together to solve global problems.

Victory in the Age of Disorder is a challenging and thought-provoking book. It is a must-read for anyone who wants to understand the challenges and opportunities that lie ahead in the 21st century.
